Dixon Men Taken in Disorderly Scene at Dance Hall at Amboy

(Telegraph Special Service)
Amboy, June 22.—Two Dixon young men were taken in custody by Deputy Sheriff Fred Washburn at a dance hall south of here Saturday night at a late hour after the officer has fought one of the pair and subdued him. It is alleged that the one young man was caught near the dance hall with a bottle of liquor in his possession and when the deputy placed him under arrest, he proceeded to try to administer a beating. Deputy Fred Richardson of Ashton was also on the grounds and the Dixonite was handcuffed and placed in a car. Later when at his own request the handcuffs were removed, he is said to have renewed his assault upon Deputy Washburn but was quickly subdued. Two bottles of liquor are said to have been taken from the pair at the county jail at Dixon, where charges will be preferred against them. A scene was created at the dance hall when others are said to have objected to the presence of the deputies and threatened to forcibly eject them.

The possibility of the calling of a special session of the Lee county board of supervisors was evident today and many of the members who were in the city were favorable to such action. The special meeting, if called, will be for the purpose of licensing the placing restrictions over dance halls throughout the county. Chairman William Todd of East Grove was one of those who was in favor of taking some action at once. The licensing of dance halls in the county is permissible after July 1 through the passage of the Bohrer bill which was passed way many others Friday at Springfield. The bill places country dance halls under the supervision of the supervisor of the township in which it is located. It also provides that the board of supervisors is empowered to license these amusement places and some strict provisions are also contained relative to the conduct of the patrons and the place. Violations of these provisions are punishable by a heavy fine and the revocation of the license.

Special Session Necessary.
A special session of the board would be necessary in order to place the country dance halls under supervision and license this year, the next regular meeting not being held until September when the outdoor dance session is well toward its close, was the opinion of several members of the board today. By calling a special session, all of the dance halls would be under supervision and licensed, it was pointed out. Some of the supervisors were in favor of the placing of deputy sheriff's at some of the halls, which are said to have been a source of more or less complaint, the deputies to be paid by the proprietors and not by the county.

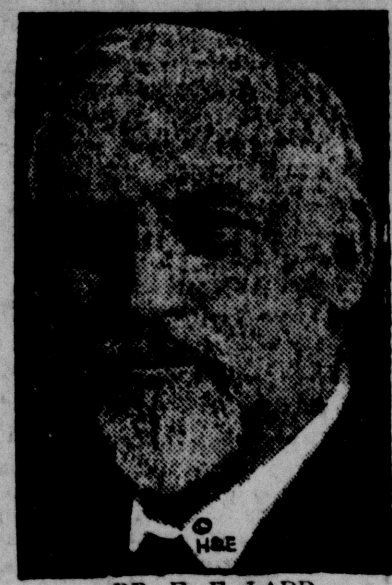

"I am in favor of calling a special session of the board and placing these places under a license," said Chairman Todd in discussing the new bill. "There have been a number of bad reports coming from several of the country dance halls throughout the county, and I believe that they should be put under control at once and not wait until next year."

It was a great day for the lad, The Telegraph is informed.

SENATOR LADD OF
N. DAK., FRIEND OF
LAFOLLETTE, DEADPassed Away in Hospital
After Short Illness
This Morning

Baltimore, Md., June 22.—(By the Associated Press)—Senator Edwin Fremont Ladd of North Dakota died here at 10:20 a. m. today.

Senator Ladd passed away quietly retaining consciousness almost to the last. Mrs. Ladd arrived from Washington an hour before the end came and was at the bedside with Milton, one of the sons who is studying law in George Washington University, and his daughter, Virginia, who attends high school in Washington.

Senator Ladd, while apparently realizing the end was near, aroused to greet them when they entered the room. The end came rapidly after their arrival. Douglas H. McArthur, the Senator's secretary, who entered the room a few minutes after Mrs. Ladd and the children, the Senator failed to recognize.

Turn Came Suddenly.

Senator Ladd had been under treatment here for two weeks for kidney trouble, a complication which developed as an aftermath of neuritis contracted a year ago in North Dakota. His condition suddenly became critical within the last three days. His physicians gave up hope of his recovery early today.

Mrs. Ladd was seriously affected by the Senator's death and due to this it was planned today to arrange funeral services in Washington, where the body would be interred temporarily in a vault until Mrs. Ladd is able to make the trip to North Dakota. It was expected that the body would be taken to Washington tomorrow.

Edwin Fremont Ladd was born in Starks, Maine, on December 13, 1859. He was successively chemist, professor, college president and United States Senator, attaining high honors, particularly in agriculture, chemistry and economics. In 1890 he moved to the Northwest, then opening up rapidly, and became a member of the faculty of the newly founded North Dakota Agricultural College, through which the state was endeavoring to build up its agricultural industry. He built up a course in chemistry which attracted nation-wide attention among educators.

President of School

As a result of his service to the agricultural college, Dr. Ladd was chosen president of the school, serving from 1916 until his election to the United States Senate in 1920.

Senator Ladd's election thrust him forward on the political stage as a strong proponent of the Non-Partisan league and a factor in the farm bloc in Congress.

The first Non-Partisan league senator had decided views on stringent regulation of corporations and opposed the Harding administration in a number of protests attacking the Supreme Court and the sugar corporations.

Allied With LaFollette

Senator Ladd's alliance with the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, and his connection with the farm bloc, made him an important member of the LaFollette forces, along with the LaFollette, Shipstead of Minnesota and others.

From the Senate at Washington he kept in close touch with the North-west and particularly North Dakota and in 1922 returned and stumped the state for his political friend, then Governor Lynn J. Frazier, republican who defeated Senator Porter J. McCumber, then regarded as strongly entrenched politically.

In 1924, Senator Ladd became chairman of the Senate oil investigating committee through the resignation of the chairmanship by Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin.

Made Tour of Europe

He made a 17,000 mile trip after the World War, studying particularly the Russian situation and made a report to the Senate that Russian conditions eventually would right themselves, but did not recommend American recognition of Russia. He was a versatile writer and during his trip wrote many suggestions for other diplomatic relations between America and European nations.

For many years Senator Ladd published the North Dakota Farmer and wrote many works on chemistry and agriculture.

He was married to Miss Rizzpah Sprague of Annapolis, Md., on Aug. 16, 1893. Eight children were born, five daughters and three sons, Rizzpah, Katherine, Rosilla, Elizabeth, Virginia, Culver, Vernon and Milton.

Sunday Excursion Well Patronized from Dixon

The first Sunday excursion operated by the North Western line in many years was run from Clinton to Chicago yesterday and was exceptionally well patronized. The first section of the excursion was filled to capacity when it arrived in Dixon and the second section also carried many excursionists when it arrived here. Dixonites to the number of 190 took advantage of the greatly reduced fare to spend the day in the metropolis.

OUT OUR WAY

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY.

GRANT DIES FROM WOUNDS INFLECTED
BY PAL IN CRIMERefused to Permit Operation;
Bitter Tragedy Ended

Chicago, June 22.—(AP)—Bernard Grant, fearful of the hangman's noose in spite of the efforts of thousands of persons throughout the country who had signed petitions urging clemency to permit physicians to perform an operation in the hope of saving his life and died thirty minutes later. He was stabbed five times on Saturday by Walter Krauser, once sentenced with Grant to hang, but later granted a new trial.

Grant was very weak from the wounds in his neck and chest, and physicians at the house of correction hospital insisted on a blood transfusion.

Prisoner Did Not Weaken

Dr. Frank Jirka pleaded, but Grant's resistance did not weaken. A half hour later the prisoner died.

Grant, who always insisted he was innocent and that Krauser alone was guilty of the killing of Policeman Ralph Saunders in a holdup in 1922, probably would have been pardoned or his sentence commuted to life imprisonment, had Krauser escaped the gallows at his second trial, which was set recently for this week. The supreme court had allowed Krauser a re-trial but denied a second hearing to Grant.

After the stalling, Grant had reiterated his declarations of innocence and voiced the hope that Krauser would escape the gallows.

When Krauser heard of Grant's death, an assistant jailer said he remarked "It that so? Well there might be some more that will die soon."

Michael Murphy Died at His Home Last Eve

Funeral services will be held at the home at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning and at 9:30 o'clock at St. Patrick's Catholic church, with burial in Amboy.

Mr. Murphy was born in Parish Inex Keen, County Monaghan, Ireland, Jan. 14, 1845, coming to America with his parents when he was three years of age. The parents settled in Amboy township and the deceased continued to make his home there until he moved to Dixon, 26 years ago.

Chicago Wins Suit Filed Against Peoples Gas Co.

Springfield, Ill., June 22.—(AP)—A big victory for the city of Chicago, by which the value of the Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co., is definitely fixed at $85,000,000 instead of $168,250,000, was secured today when the company dismissed its case in the Sangamon county circuit court after litigation lasting since January 1918.

Donald R. Richberg, of counsel for the city of Chicago, was in court when the case was dismissed. The order of the Commerce Commission returned in December 1920 is effective permanently. This order was appealed by the company to the circuit court in April 1923. That court reversed the commission and in June 1923 was in turn reversed itself by the Supreme Court.

"The going value" of the company consequently is $7,000,000 instead of $10,000,000 as requested by the company; the working capital $6,000,000 instead of $9,000,000. Beside that, the company was denied anything for "repayment of losses" which had been set at $12,500,000.

When the case was first filed, the company asked an increase in the Chicago gas rate to $1.40 from $1.15, but since then the rate has been lowered to 95 cents.

The convention was opened officially yesterday at a concert given in Druid Hill Park by the student band of Bozoesport, Ill.

SIMPLICITY MARKS FUNERAL SENATOR LAFOLLETTE TODAY

No Pomp or Ceremony at Last Rites for Wisconsin Leader

Madison, Wis., June 22.—(AP)—Services of extreme simplicity attend the burial today of Senator Robert Marion LaFollette.

Although from the moment his funeral train arrived here last Saturday from Washington, the state had claimed his body for its own, there was nothing of pomp or of ceremony in these, the last honors that it might tender. That was as the Senator himself had wished.

To friends of a life time was given the sad task of conveying the body to sanctuary in his native soil at a point overlooking a broad blue lake beside which he was born and came to man's estate.

Many others with whom he had labored so long in the state and the nation were gathered from far and near to do homage at his bier.

The expansive rotunda of the massive state capitol where yesterday his body lay in state was the place of the brief funeral services. That service was arranged as follows:

Hymn—"Nearer My God to Thee," Mozart and Mannechor chorus.

Funeral sermon—Dr. A. E. Haydon of Chicago.

Hymn—"Abide With Me," Mozart and Mannechor chorus.

"America," with the chorus leading the audience.

Thousands had journeyed to Madison for the funeral. Many of these came to join the throngs that viewed the body yesterday, while others reached here today by train from Chicago and other nearby points some hours before the services at 1 p. m.

Throughout the hours that the body lay in state, a steady stream of people passed in reverent silence. Even before the doors of the state house were opened at noon, long lines had formed at Capitol Square and when they were closed again at twilight, some still were waiting.

Mt. Morris Woman Hurt in Automobile Crash

Freeport, Ill.—Cuts, bruises and severe shaking up are the extent of the injuries incurred by Mrs. Louise Horst, 68, of Mt. Morris, Ill., in an automobile accident at a crossroad in Chamois township, Green county, Wisconsin, on Thursday, according to the statement of physicians who made an X-ray examination. The patient is at Deaconess hospital this city. In the crash, which was caused by a Wisconsin car running out from a cross road and striking the car in which Mrs. Horst was riding, were also Mrs. W. H. Meyers, of Freeport, daughter of Mrs. Horst, and two of Mrs. Meyers' daughters. Mrs. Meyers has three fractured ribs, broken nose and cuts on the face. One of the little girls was cut on the face, but the other escaped injury. It was at first feared Mrs. Horst had incurred a fracture of the hip and serious internal injuries, but the X-ray indicates such was not the case.

DIXON MEN HELD IN STERLING AS LIQUOR PEDDLERS

Mistake in Place of Delivery Said to Have Caught 'em

(Telegraph Special Service)
Sterling, June 22.—F. M. Logan and Fred Rausch of Dixon and A. F. Craig of Amboy were this morning held to the October grand jury of the Whiteside county Circuit Court under bonds of $1500 each on charges of possession, transportation and sale of intoxicating liquor. Their arrest and arraignment resulted from their alleged mistake in the place of delivery of their cargo.

According to the charges made at the hearing the three delivered a sugar sack, containing two five-gallon jugs of moonshine to a coal shed back of Central park—but they put it in the wrong coal shed, and Mrs. Florence Howard, to whom the shed they entered belonged, saw them enter and depart—sans sack. She rushed down stairs from her flat, it is said, locked the coal shed, and called the police.

Officer Ben Real responded, picked up the three, and held them until this morning when they were arraigned and bound over. Logan and Rausch, represented by former State Attorney J. J. Ludens, furnished bonds for their appearance before the grand jury—but Craig had been unable to secure surety at any early hour this afternoon.

Greek Divides His Profits Among Poor

New York, June 22.—(AP)—Bound by his beliefs to forswear riches, John Doukas, 51, who came from Greece, 33 years ago, with $125 as his sole assets, but who has built up a profitable confectionery business on the East Side, has begun distributing his profits among charitable institutions and his needy neighbors.

Distribution of all his money, except that needed for the actual wants of his wife and seven children, is an annual custom with Doukas. He began business in this country with a 25 cent bunch of bananas as his stock in trade. The surplus profits of his last year's business will enable him to give three truck loads of gifts to 25 charitable institutions, to distribute about 10,000 boxes of candy and to give a week-long party with dancing and refreshments to his neighbors besides sending money back to Greece to support 100 orphans he has taken under his wing.

Says J. Ham's Little Hat is in Ring for Governor

Marion, Ill., June 22.—(AP)—Former State Senator Kent E. Keller of Ava, a democratic candidate for governor in last year's primary election, issued a statement here today declaring that James Hamilton Lewis, of Chicago, would again be a candidate for that office in 1926. He also predicted that the people, and no "advisory convention" would name the party's candidates.

"Senator Lewis' little soft hat is in the ring and around it will rally the men who are to control the destinies of the democratic party during the next few years," Senator Keller said. Senator Keller made it clear he was not speaking for Senator Lewis. The two have been close political friends, however, and Senator Keller was the leader in the joint assembly that put Senator Lewis over the long term of United States senator in 1913.

Pretty Bobbed Haired Girl Admits Banditry

Chicago, June 22.—(AP)—A pretty bobbed haired girl, arrested late last night in the act of holding up a taxi cab driver, confessed that she was the mysterious girl robber who within a week had engineered five similar holdups.

She revealed that the "gun" with which she threatened the driver's life in each robbery, was a toy pistol.

"I needed money awfully bad," was the explanation given by the girl, who gave her age as 19. Police said she was attractively dressed and might have passed as a demure high school student.

LAWYERS SAY HE WILL TELL TALE TUESDAY

But Few More Defense Witnesses Remain to be Heard

Chicago, June 22.—(AP)—The climax of the trial of William Darling Shepherd, for murder—the appearance of the defendant on the witness stand—was in prospect today. With several defense witnesses still to be heard, it was indicated that Shepherd's turn would come late today or early Tuesday.

Possibility that the defendant would not take the stand was dissipated by a statement by defense that they hoped to present him by Tuesday morning at the latest.

The defense today further attacked the testimony and character of the state's star witness, Charles C. Faiman.

Mrs. Lucella Rhubell, for two months business manager of Faiman's school, the National University of Sciences, testified she would not believe Faiman on oath, that she never saw a letter from Shepherd to Faiman, although she kept the files, and that she never had seen Shepherd at Faiman's school.

Faiman testified that Shepherd wrote a letter inquiring about a course in criminal bacteriology, obtained typhoid germs and was instructed in how to use them to slay "Billy" McCintock, his millionaire foster-son who had made a will in which Shepherd was named chief beneficiary.

Mrs. Rhubell said that she had removed all "dead wood" from the letter file well before the date, October 1924, the alleged Shepherd letter was mentioned as being in Faiman's school records, and that no such letter ever was seen.

She admitted that she ran down a fire escape when state's attorney's detectives visited her home in connection with the Shepherd trial because she did not want any further publicity. She also admitted she had been paid $20 weekly by the defense.

She also was arrested and fined recently for disorderly conduct, she admitted upon cross examination, but said her arrest was caused by a rental agent who wanted to get her apartment.

Defense Paid Her Fine

W. W. O'Brien, of defense counsel, brought out that he paid Mrs. Rhubell's fine "because I thought you were being persecuted."

Dr. John Fischer, head of the Fischer laboratories, was the next witness, qualifying as an expert bacteriologist. In technical language he testified that Shepherd lacked the scientific knowledge to propagate and care for the germs. Faiman said he gave the accused man until the opportunity for slaying young McCintock arrived.

He said that a man who had the operation of transfer and propagation of germs explained to him only once probably would be unable to keep any of the bacilli alive for a year and that if any germs lived they probably would be low in virulence.

According to Faiman, Shepherd and the fatal germs approximately a year before they were introduced into young McCintock's body.

Dr. Fischer said it had been "abundantly proven" that some persons could be exposed to virulent typhoid germs and escape infection.

He said that the effects of a cathartic administered early in infection would not necessarily seriously complicate the illness, a step admitted in Shepherd's treatment of the youth before physicians were summoned.

Had Employed Faiman
Dr. Fischer said he formerly employed Faiman for some of the simpler duties about the Fischer laboratories, and that Faiman was not capable of the more complicated work.

Asked as to his valuation of Faiman's character and reputation for truth and veracity, Dr. Fischer said: "I regard him as a reincarnation of Baron Munchausen."

The prosecution objected to the comparison, however, and Dr. Fischer substituted the words: "Very bad."

Asked if he thought Shepherd could have learned from one demonstration how to preserve germs over a period of a year so that they still would be fatally virulent, Dr. Fischer replied: "You might as well think you could learn to fly an airplane by taking a correspondence course."

Dr. Fischer testified upon direct examination that the most infinite care and patience were necessary for the preservation of germs in test tubes.

The witness said the typhoid bacilli would have to be in a person two weeks before it caused a hemorrhage in the intestines.

Dr. Fischer said a temperature rise is noted about 15 or 20 days after infection. He previously had testified it took about two weeks for the germs to reach the intestines.

MELON TIME—
(By Hal Cochran)

Jes' give me a melon; a big, 'round, ripe melon. Jes' pluck it right off of the vine. I'll pick out a spot in the shade when I've got a melon that's really all mine.

I'll sit me down quick and I'll eat myself sick. The thought of the feast makes me sigh. Just think what's in store when you've reached to the core, with the juice squirtin' up in your eye.

It's likely, gosh knows, that I'll ruin my clothes, if I eat in the real southern style. But shucks, it's so good—would I do it? I would! For no matter what comes, it's worth while.

No kiddin'. I'm tellin', I'm cravin' a melon. Aw, bring on a green one—full grown. 'Tis the last time I'll plead, 'cause I'll save every seed and next year I'll be growin' my own.

W. C. T. U. FRIDAY AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH—

The Women's Christian Temperance Union held its regular meeting Friday afternoon at the Congregational church, the session being one of exceptional interest and helpfulness. After the song and prayer service and the business meeting, the program of the afternoon was enjoyed, being in charge of the Flower Mission and Relief committee. It opened with prayer by Miss Leivan and the reading of the Scripture by Mrs. H. Heckman. A delightful reading, her own composition, was given by Mrs. Messer, the theme being the mission of flowers. It was so heartily appreciated that Mrs. Messer was compelled to respond to an encore.

Mrs. Archie Klein favored with a vocal solo appropriate to the mission of flowers. Her solos are always a pleasure to the ladies of the W. C. T. U. and Friday afternoon's was no exception. In the absence of Rev. Hale, pastor of the Congregational church, who was to have addressed the Union, Mrs. Richardson gave a talk on the beauty and mission of flowers, which was a help to better living on the part of all who hear it. Before adjourning the Union extended an invitation to every woman in Dixon who wished to find help in the excellent spiritual meetings which the society enjoys.

SAVE THE TRIMMINGS

Be sure the butcher gives you the trimmings from meat, because you can use them for making soup stock.

INSTEAD OF BUTTER

Beef fat, clarified, is a good substitute for butter in shortening bread, biscuits and ginger bread.

WHEN FRYING FOOD

Food to be fried should be as dry as possible and not very cold.

FOR CROQUETTES

Cold cheese and macaroni may be utilized in croquettes and with certain vegetables.

USE KNITTING NEEDLE

A knitting needle is better than a fork for piercing vegetables to test whether they are done or not since it breaks them less.

WITH ACID FRUITS

Avoid serving milk or cream at the same time with acid fruits, particularly with oranges or cherries.

TO BEST ADVANTAGE

Fruit is most wholesome eaten by itself at the beginning of a meal or as dessert and least wholesome in the form of pudding or pie.

FRUITS AND CEREALS

Sweet fruits such as bananas, dates or figs are best with cereals and starchy foods as acid fruits sometimes interfere with the digestion of the starch.

County Council S. S. Meeting Sunday

Workers and others are invited to the Sunday School County council meeting in the Lee Center Congregational church next Sunday afternoon, June 28 at 2:15. An interesting program is being arranged. Several expect to attend from Dixon. The meeting will be in charge of Lee County Sunday School Association officers.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE CLUB WILL MEET WITH MRS. GANTZ—

The Household Science club will meet with Mrs. Max Gantz in Nelson Thursday afternoon, and all members are asked to attend, as the annual election of officers will be a feature of the business meeting. Responses to roll call will be on "My Flower Garden."

Wear a Fish at Beach

This poor fish needn't be pitted, for it has a chance to get into the water every day. It is of black embroidery on a light gray suit. The turban is of white rubber with a fish sketched in black. For a mermaid we can think of no more appropriate decoration.

Menus for a Family
Tested by SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Stewed prunes, cereal, thin cream, crisp toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Asparagus on toast, brown bread and butter, sandwiches, pineapple sponge, plain cake, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Roasted flank of beef, mashed potatoes, jelly tomato salad, raspberry shortcake, white bread, milk, coffee.

The juice of the raspberries can be given to a child of four but the fruit and the shortcake should not be served to him. With this exception the menus can be used as suggested.

Pineapple Sponge

Two cups finely chopped fresh pineapple, 3/4 cup sugar, 1 cup water, 1 tablespoon gelatin, whites of 2 eggs.

Use the juice of the pineapple adding water to make 1 cup. If the fruit is ripe and sweet less sugar will be needed. Add juice and water of pineapple and cook 10 minutes. Sift in sugar and remove from the fire when the sugar is dissolved. Soften gelatin in cold water for 10 minutes and stir in boiling pineapple mixture as it is removed from the fire. Let stand until cool and beginning to jelly. Fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into a mold and let stand on ice until firm and well chilled. Serve with a boiled custard made with the yolks of eggs.

CYNTHIA GRAY SAYS—

"When do women dress to please?" asks M. Paul Poiret of Paris.

And without hesitating, he answers his own question: "Why, the men, of course! Let men vanish from the face of the earth, and for how long would women bother about their clothes and complexions? For not a single second!"

Paul Poiret is the fashion dictator for the whole world. If he says waistlines shall be normal, normal they become over night. If he decrees that lipstick red shall be the color of fashion today, lipstick red is seen in the world's shop windows tomorrow!

"I have been asked why it is that the most successful dressmakers are men," Paul Poiret said recently. "Because women want to look as men want them to look. And who knows better than men how men want their women-folk to look?"

It sounds reasonable, does it not? And yet, I think that M. Paul Poiret, who knows all about styles, knows little about women. I am sure that not all women dress to please men.

A great many of them dress to startle their women friends, or to draw their admiration. There are many mothers who dress to please their families—mothers who wear hats their daughters pick out for them, for example! And there are still more who like to "look nice" for themselves.

There is an almost spiritual joy to be found in the sense of bodily cleanliness that a person has after a thorough grooming; and nothing gives a woman such police and assurance as the knowledge that her new hat is becoming.

If you ask an average man what he thinks about short skirts for grown women the chances are that he will say: "I think they're hideous, and that they make a woman look like a caricature of herself." But that doesn't cause any woman to lengthen her skirt!

Women know that the majority of men think bobbed hair unfeminine. But short hair is comfortable, and long hair isn't. And so the popularity of "shingles" grows daily.

The type of girl who is attractive to almost any type of male is the "fluffy ruffly" little thing, who wears frills when they're not in style, pink shoulder bows, and tiny high-heeled slippers.

If Monsieur Paul Poiret were right—and women dressed to please men—that's the only type of femininity that we'd ever see. As it is, she's as rare as Roes' eggs!

STEEL TRAP METHOD IS NEEDLESSLY CRUEL—

Omaha, June 22.—Mrs. Minnie Madern Fiske, the actress, addressed a group of Omaha women on the subject of the steel trap and its uses in trapping. She did not decry the wearing of furs. She only asked her hearers to decline to wear furs that come with the taint of unnecessary cruelty in their taking. She was emphatic in asserting that the steel trap method of catching wild animals is needlessly cruel.

Mrs. Fiske reminded her hearers of what happened to the custom of wearing the aigrette of heron's feathers when the women America found out that the beautiful decoration was torn from the breast of a nesting mother bird. A similar feeling is looked to help out in the fur crusade, she said. Not abandonment of fur for women's wear, but abolition of the cruel steel trap. If the women take hold, the steel trap will soon join the dodo, Mrs. Fiske asserted.

Former Dixon Boy Married in Detroit

A wedding of unusual interest to many Dixon friends was solemnized Thursday, June 18th, at 2533 Edison avenue, Detroit, Mich., when Miss Ethel Bywater Collins became the bride of Harold A. Drew, son of Mrs. Mabel Drew, 822 Peoria avenue of this city. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Ralph M. Crissman, former pastor of the Presbyterian church of Dixon, now pastor of the Highland Park Presbyterian church, in the presence of a few friends.

The Dixon guests were Mrs. Drew and daughters, Mrs. John Krug and Miss Erma Drew. Mr. Drew is a former Dixon boy and a congenial young man who has a large circle of friends who extend their best wishes to him and his bride for their future happiness.

LIST OF EXERCISES IN SPORTS FOR WOMEN—

Los Angeles, Calif., June 20.—Women more than forty years of age who wish to become athletic should begin by pitching horseshoes, Miss Charlotte Stewart, head of the Physical Training Department of the Salt Lake City high school, said address the women's section of the National Amateur Athletic Federation in session here today.

Miss Stewart also recommended a judicious amount of croquet, putting on the green and finally volley ball, as the second stage of exercises for women beginners of middle-age. "If the average house wife carried her sports all through life as does the English woman," explained Miss Stewart, "she could pooh pooh horse shoes and store up vitality on the tennis court."

YANKEES UNABLE TO WIN OVER TWO GAMES IN A ROW

Winning Streaks Have Been Rudely Ended by Opponents

New York, June 22.—(AP)—The tenth winning streak of the Yankees this season has ended like the other nine. A pair of triumphs has been the limit for consecutive victories of the club.

Although the White Sox were easily subdued in two straight games by the Huguenots, yesterday Chicago pounded three Yankee pitchers for a 9-2 decision. Babe Ruth, who had a perfect day at bat on Saturday with four singles, failed to get a hit yesterday.

Smarting under two defeats from the Senators, the Indians turned the tables and won, 7-5 Walter Johnson vocated the box in the seventh after Cleveland had totalled nine hits off his delivery.

Captain Frank Frisch returned to the Giants' lineup for their first time since a finger was broken, May 16, and with Jack Scott in the box again, the National League leaders disposed of the Reds, 4-3, and took the series, three games to two.

The Boston Braves pulled out with an even break in their four game stay at St. Louis by taking the final number, 7-3. Four twirlers were used by the Cards while Benton went the route for Boston.

Chicago romped away with a 3-2 victory over the Phillies in the ninth inning, Brooks' circuit drive with a runner on base ending the contest.

Young Kibbie, former University of Texas star, still shines for the Boston Braves. Since he was shifted to second base he is showing Manager Hancock he can play there as well as at short. For a little fellow he swings a wicked bat. He knocked out two doubles and a single against the Cardinals and scored two runs. He has a lot of speed.

A right hand slugger who can drive out a hit when it is needed, at last has been added to the Cubs roster. He is "Mandy" Brooks, former Columbus American Association, who is now playing center field. Brooks came through with a home run yesterday and broke up a pitchers' duel in which his club was trailing 2-1, when they went into the ninth. There were two out and a man on when Brooks delivered.

Gabby Hartnett was spiked above the knee yesterday when he doubled Sand in the third inning. Sand's spikes tore into the leg and Gabby had to have a couple of stitches to draw the wound together.

COLLEGE CREWS MEET TODAY IN GREAT REGATTA

Seventeen Crews are Ready for Races on the Hudson

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22.—(AP)—A cloudless sky and a peaceful river greeted Poughkeepsie this morning as the city began to fill with visitors for the 28th annual regatta of the Inter-Collegiate Rowing Association on the Hudson late this afternoon. Seventeen crews—seven varsity, five junior varsity and five freshmen—will compete for intercollegiate rowing honors.

Washington and the Navy continue to be the favorites in the four mile varsity event. In the two mile junior varsity race the critics were favoring Syracuse and Washington, but all concede that this race would be a toss up. Syracuse, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania were favored in the two mile yearling event.

The first race, the junior varsity event, is scheduled for four o'clock eastern standard time.

The freshman race is due to start at 4:45 o'clock, while the varsity eight are to go at 5:45 o'clock.

THE WORLD PUBLIC WINS.

It seemed too good to be true when news came from Geneva the other day that 18 nations had voted for effective control of the international arms traffic and 27 nations had signed an agreement not to use poison gas or deadly bacteria in warfare.

The American public had almost made up its mind that this conference was hopeless failure. It had started out by overthrowing the program prepared for it by an enlightened committee of arms reformers, agreeing "in principle" to the control of arms, but specifically refusing to apply the principle to warships, submarines, poison gas and various other highly efficient contrivances for wholesale killing. The armament industry seemed to be winning.

Then suddenly and surprisingly the tide turned. The conference began to show a serious and earnest purpose to minimize the chances of war under less horrible conditions as should be inevitable. Item after item, it took up its earlier decisions and reconsidered them. In the end it went farther in the way of humanitarian action than a Missouriian had any reason to expect.

Why this remarkable shift at Geneva? Because the conference felt the shock of world opinion. Returns began to come in from the countries represented by those cynical delegates, and from other critical and observant countries. The world public had its eye on the conference, and reacted promptly.

It was an amazing illustration of the existence and power of something quite new in the world—this "world public" having its will through the force of expressed opinion.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

It is getting so that the Fourth of July is celebrated in Dixon for about three weeks and we wonder if it meets with the approval of the majority of the citizenship. Some cities have ordinances which prohibit the sale or explosion of the larger fire-crackers, and some of those cities enforce the ordinance. We believe Dixon has some such ordinance, but if we are to judge by the booming of the explosives that are making the nights hideous throughout this city, it is not being enforced.

It is sort of a travesty on the real Fourth to have it stretched out for a fortnight. It takes away from the patriotism and seriousness of that glorious anniversary. Furthermore, the constant bombardment about the streets of the city is an annoyance and a nuisance. It keeps little children awake and is torture for sick people.

Dixon should be able to keep the Fourth celebration confined to the day for which it was intended and to regulate the sale and use of explosives so that the Fourth itself may be safe and sane.

THE PRESIDENT STREAM.

A June day on a little, winding river is full of surprises and joys.

A ramble along its length quietly passes the peaceful fishermen, pauses to rejoice at a lovely view, laughs with the group of children bathing in a sheltered pool, lies dreaming on a grassy bank where the willows bend gently over the water, moves on to the next pretty scene to spread his simple lunch. Here and there he finds other happy idlers, some just loafing in the blessed way that fills that soul with hope and strength.

A frog plops into the water from this bank. A butterfly, gorgeous dragon flies and brilliantly colored water bugs, a red-winged blackbird, a kingfisher and other birds with sweet but unidentified songs are sharing the day and the scene with the ramble.

Isn't necessary to go on a far journey for one's summer rest if there is a little stream or lake or bit of woodland near at hand.

DIET AGAIN.

Whenever a hot spell comes on—and that will be often for the next month or two—one of the wisest things any man or woman can do is keep a close watch on his or her diet.

Of course, it really ought to be a year-round practice. But it's especially important in hot weather.

If you're given to three solid meals a day, winter and summer, with heavy steaks and pastries at midday, don't wonder if hot weather leaves you groggy. The wonder is it doesn't do worse to you.

Salads, fruits, cool drinks and so one are in order now. Save the flap-jacks and hamburger for next December.

Railroads may have lost much by reason of automobile travel, but they are finding comfort in the fact that by the same course they are losing the harvest hobo. Laborers who used to overrun the freight trains going into the grain states, now are traveling in machines. The new style of travel has upset calculations of the labor bureaus. So quickly does the laborer flit from one locality to another in search of higher wages that the bureaus are not sure of their supply.

One Minnesota county that once had twenty-five lakes now has two. The march of civilization and the desire for possession of the land brought about the change. The state now has a new law designed to preserve such lakes as are left.

July 4 is National Defense Day. First thing in order is defense against lockjaw caused by unregulated firecrackers.

The Board of Temperance of the Methodist church calls Noah, Nero and Alexander the "conspicuous drunks" of history, and points out that in their day whiskey had not been invented, and that they must therefore have acquired their drunks on the beverages now touted as "non-intoxicating."

Unfortunately for the argument, these historic drunks all come from southern climates, and consequently belong to the "and wine" half of the question; which does not mean anything. "Beer and wine," in modern agitation, means "beer." But if we must rely on ancient examples, rather than on modern experience, illustrations can also be given from the less-known mythologies of the beer-drinking north. In Beowulf, the oldest literary monument of English speech, the thegns of Hrothgar were "beore druncen" and "neadu druncen"; that is, "beer drunk" and "mead drunk." And in the perhaps even older Finnish epic, the Kalevala, Ancient Wainamoinen not only brewed beer, but got drunk on it. So, if we are to depend on literature, the wine of Noah, the need of Wainamoinen, and the beer of Hrothgar were all intoxicating. So is Pilsener.

One investigator points out that in bones and muscles the higher apes are nearer to man than to monkeys. Another has been investigating the thinking of chimpanzees, and finds their minds nearer to man than to monkeys.

Perhaps it would add needed humor to an alto-serious discussion of the disputants would read Clarence Day's brilliant little book "This Simian World." In which he approaches it from the other angle. Instead of inquiring whether we are descended from the apes, he shows that we have not yet descended, but are still only super-apes. A race of super-apes would have had a more than Chinese main for work. A race of super-apes would have been clearly, graceful, self-respecting and concentrated, but crafty, quarrelsome, individualistic, and incapable of co-operation. But only a race of super-monkeys would have so loved chatter as to make free speech their most sacred right, parliaments their most admired institutions, libraries their most precious accumulation, and newspapers their favorite daily interest. If we are fallen angels, we have fallen far. But if we are super-apes, we have made a pretty good job of it, and with all our laziness, instability, indecency, incessant chatter, and other similar qualities, there is still hope of improvement.

WHY SHOULD JAPAN HAVE "HUMILIATION DAY"?

Certain Japanese societies propose a "humiliation day" on the anniversary of the American immigration law. Inasmuch as they profess to object chiefly to the impotency of the passage of the law, they might better call an exaltation day, to congratulate themselves on belonging to a nation that does everything politely.

So far as the actual prevention of immigration is concerned, they had been co-operating for years in enforcing that. And if the objection is to "race discrimination," on whose behalf do they raise it?

There had been discrimination in their favor, as against the other Asiatic races, for years. This law merely removes it. Japan never objected to being included with Chinese and Indians in our naturalization laws. This law merely applies the same principle to immigration laws.

If there shall be no "race" in those laws, there can be no line against the human floods of China and India. If there is, then Japan is demanding to be placed with the European instead of with the Asiatic races. Some Americans might listen to that argument. But no other Asiatics.

NEWS WILL ALWAYS AROUSE INTEREST

The only way to arouse interest in anything, in this news-ridden world, is to make news of it. And the way to make news of it is to start a fight over it. Do that, and you can make news, and therefore a popular issue, of even the multiplication table, the ten commandments and the eternal verities.

This is the reason why evolution is in everybody's mouth. Except for its momentary involvement in the other issue of freedom of knowledge and teaching, there is nothing new about evolution. It is no different an issue than it has always been.

But a law, a lawsuit, and the participation of prominent men have made it news. Therefore, everybody

JOHN GILPIN'S RIDE

The louder he yelled "Whoa" the harder the horse ran

MI O' MI, the Story Teller, jingled his bells merrily. "Would you like to hear the story of John Gilpin and the way he rode to Edmonton?" he asked the Twins.

"I should," said Nick.

"So should I," said Nancy.

"Then that settles it," declared MI O' MI.

"The story of John Gilpin is really a poem, and some day I hope you will read it. But I cannot remember poetry very well, so I shall tell it to you in my own words."

"One day John's wife said to him, John tomorrow is our tenth wedding day (or anniversary as we call it now) so let's go on a picnic, our own family and my sister and her child."

"That's a fine idea," said John Gilpin. "I'd like it. He never let on that the cost bothered him, which was rather fine of John, for next to his family he loved the feel of coins."

"But he didn't worry long because his thrifty wife said, 'We'll save a little by taking our own drink, John. We'll put lemonade in one jug for the children and coffee in another for us, and you can take the two of them—jugs, I mean—hitched to your belt. No one will see because you can cover all with your red cape.'"

"How's that?" says John.

"Why, you see," says Goodwife Gilpin, "the carriage and pair can take only the five of us. As for you, you will have to ride a horse."

"A horse?" cried her husband.

"Then I'll borrow one. My friend, the Calender from the Town of Ware will lend me a horse gladly."

"What is a Calender?" asked Nick.

"Why a Calender is a—well, he's a person who presses cloth," said MI O' MI.

"I don't know of any nowadays, but there used to be lots of them. Anyway, John Gilpin's friend was a Calender and he had a horse and John wanted to borrow it to go on his picnic."

is suddenly interested, and the people will learn more about evolution in three months from the newspapers than they would in 30 years from books.

master mariner, he followed it for years. So he's an authority on ocean problems as well as those of the air.

"Are surface war fleets obsolete?" I asked.

"As the dodo," said Martin positive.

"Then the plane has supplanted the battleship?"

"Absolutely."

"But planes," I argued, "must have a base to operate from."

"So," rejoined the captain, "must battleships. They're as helpless as any craft afloat—take a mile and a half to stop, 19 minutes to get up full speed, aren't very fast as best, steer reluctantly and have to have 10 times their own number of attendant craft to safeguard and keep them supplied."

"Why, battleships," went on the captain, "hardly were used at all in the last year—had to be kept virtually inland—couldn't be trusted at sea account of submarines. And submarines aren't safe with planes overhead.

"They can't go deep enough to hide, except in dirty water. Anywhere it's clear, an aviator can spot them and then they're lost."

"In short, a plane has no handicap that a surface ship or submarine hasn't got, and it's minus many that they have."

"The truth is," Martin concluded, "there's no defense against planes—not even other planes, if the attackers strike at night. The whole strategy in future wars will be to land the first blow."

"It's a cruel thing to say, but it must knock out an unprepared, defenseless enemy. Once knocked out, it will be beyond his power to retaliate, at any rate for a long time to come."

You've seen an airplane climb into the sky in great sweeping spirals. A fascinating sight. Here's another spiral that's just as fascinating, and more practical.

We advertise good values; a lot of people are interested and buy. Our volume increases; we take less margin on each sale; distribute expenses more widely; give still finer values—so it goes, getting better and better.

And you're profiting all the time. Advertising is the cause of it all; it saves you money and makes business for us.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

I was so stunned by this sudden shock that for a time I must have nearly lost my reason. I have a vague recollection, as one remembers a bad dream, of rushing about through the woods all round the empty camp, calling wildly for my companions. No answer came back from the silent shadows. The horrible thought that I might never see them again, that I might find myself abandoned all alone in that dreadful place, with no possible way of descending into the world below, that I might live and die in that nightmare country, drove me to desperation. I could have torn my hair and beaten my head in my despair. Only now did I realize how I had learned to lean upon my companions, upon the serene self-confidence of Challenger, and upon the masterful, humorous coolness of Lord John Roxton. Without them I was like a child in the dark, helpless and powerless. I did not know which way to turn or what I should do first.

After a period, during which I sat in bewilderment, I set myself to try and discover what sudden misfortune could have befallen my companions. The whole disordered appearance of the camp showed that there had been some sort of attack, and the rifle-shot no doubt marked the time when it had occurred. That there should have been only one shot showed that it had been all over in an instant. The rifles still lay upon the ground, and one of them—Lord John's—had the empty cartridge in the breech. The blankets of Challenger and of Summerlee beside the fire suggested that they had been asleep at the time. The cases of ammunition and of food were scattered about in a wild litter, together with our unfortunate cameras and plate-carriers, but none of them were missing. On the other hand, all the exposed provisions—and I remember that there were a considerable quantity of them—were gone. They were animals, then, and not natives, who had made the inroad, for surely the latter would have left nothing behind.

But if animals, or some single terrible animal, then what had become of my comrades? A ferocious beast would surely have destroyed them and left their remains. It is true that there was that one hideous pool of blood, which told of violence. Such a monster as had pursued me during the night could have carried away a victim as easily as a cat would a mouse. In that case the others would have followed in pursuit. But then they would assuredly have taken their rifles with them. The more I tried to think it out with my confused and weary brain the less could I find any plausible explanation. I searched round in the forest, but could see no tracks which could help me to conclusion. Once I lost myself, and it was only by good luck, and after an hour of wandering, that I found the camp once more.

Suddenly a thought came to me and brought some little comfort to my heart. I was not absolutely alone in the world. Down at the bottom of the cliff, and within call of me, was waiting the faithful Zamboni. I went to the edge of the plateau and looked over. Sure enough, he was squatting among his blankets beside his fire in his little camp. But, to my amazement, a second man was seated in front of him. For an instant my heart leaped for joy, as I thought that one of my comrades had made his way safely down. But a second glance dispelled the hope. The rising sun shone red upon the man's skin. He was an Indian. I shouted loudly and waved my handkerchief. Presently Zamboni looked up, waved his hand, and turned to ascend the pinnacle. In a short time he was standing close to me and listening with deep distress to the story which I told him.

"Devil got them for sure, Massa Malone," said he. "You got into the devil's country, sah, and he take you all to himself. You take advice, Massa Malone, and come down quick, else he get you as well."

"How can I come down, Zamboni?" "You get creepers from trees, Massa Malone. Throw them over here. I make fast to this stump, and so you have bridge."

"We have thought of that. There are no creepers here which could bear us."

"Send for ropes, Massa Malone." "Who can I send, and where?" "Send to Indian village, sah. Plenty hideout in Indian village. Indian down below; send him."

"Who is he?"

"One of our Indians. Other ones beat him and take away his pay. He come back to us. Ready now to take letter, bring rope, anything."

To take a letter! Why not? Perhaps he might bring help; but in any case he would ensure that our lives were not spent for nothing, and that news of all that we had won for Science should reach our friends at home. I had two completed letters already waiting. I would spend the day in writing a third, which would bring my experiences absolutely up to date. The Indian could bear this back to the world. I ordered Zamboni, therefore, to come again in the evening and I spent my miserable and lonely day in recording my own adventures of the night before. I also drew up a note, to be given to any white merchant or captain of a steam-boat whom the Indian could find, imploring them to see that ropes were sent to us, since our lives must depend upon it. These documents I threw to Zamboni in the evening, and also my purse, which contained three English sovereigns. These were to be given to the Indian, and he was promised twice as much if he returned with the ropes. So now you will understand, my dear Mr. McArdle, how this communication reaches you, and you will never hear again from your unfortunate correspondent. To-night I am too weary and too depressed to make my plans. Tomorrow I must think out some way by which I shall keep in touch with this camp, and yet search round for any traces of my unhappy friends.

CHAPTER XIII

"A Slight which I shall Never Forget"

Just as the sun was setting upon that melancholy night I saw the lonely figure of the Indian upon the vast plain beneath me, and I watched him, our one faint hope of salvation, until he disappeared in the rising mists of evening which lay, rose-tinted from the setting sun, between the far-off river and me. It was quite dark when I at last turned back to our stricken camp, and my last vision as I went was the red gleam of Zamboni's fire, the one point of light in the wide world below, as was his faithful presence in my own shadowed soul. And yet I felt happier than I had done since this crushing blow had fallen upon me, for it was good to think that the world should know what we had done, so that at the worst our names should not perish with our bodies, but should go down to posterity associated with the result of our labors.

It was an awesome thing to sleep in that ill-fated camp; and yet it was even more unnerving to do so in the jungle. One or the other it must be. Prudence, on the one hand, warned me that I should remain on guard, but exhausted nature, on the other, declared that I should do nothing of the kind. I climbed up on a to a limb of the great ginkgo tree, but there was no secure perch on its rounded surface, and I should certainly have fallen off and broken my neck the moment I began to doze. I got down, therefore, and pondered over what I should do. Finally, I closed the door of the zareba, lit three separate fires in a triangle, and having eaten a hearty supper dropped off into a profound sleep, from which I had a strange and most welcome awakening. In the early morning, just as day was breaking, a hand was laid upon my arm, and starting up, with all my nerves in a tingle and my hand feeling for a rifle, I gave a cry of joy as in the cold gray light I saw Lord John Roxton kneeling beside me.

It was he—and yet it was not he. I had left him calm in his bearing, correct in his person, prim in his dress. Now he was pale and wild-eyed, gasping as he breathed like one who has run far and fast. His gaunt face was scratched and bloody, his clothes were hanging in rags, and his hat was gone. I stared in amazement, but he gave me no chance for questions. He was grabbing at our stores all the time he spoke.

"Quick, young fellow! Quick!" he cried. "Every moment counts. Get the rifles, both of them. I have the other two. Now, all the cartridges you can gather. Fill up your pockets. Now, some food. Half a dozen tins will do. That's all right! Don't wait to talk or think. Get a move on, or we are done!"

U. C. T. PICNIC SATURDAY WAS HAPPY AFFAIR

Dixon Council, No. 550 United Commercial Travelers still retain the baseball championship title, at least claiming supremacy over the Sterling council. Having won the title a year ago, the Dixon salesmen defended successfully their right to that claim Saturday afternoon at the annual picnic and outing which was held at the Assembly park, winning the contest by a score of 26 to 19. It required but four innings to satisfy all concerned. Deck's home run with the bases loaded in the second and Newton's one handed stab of Wallace's circuit clout were features in the second round when Dixon overcame a nine run lead gained by Sterling and put the contest on ice.

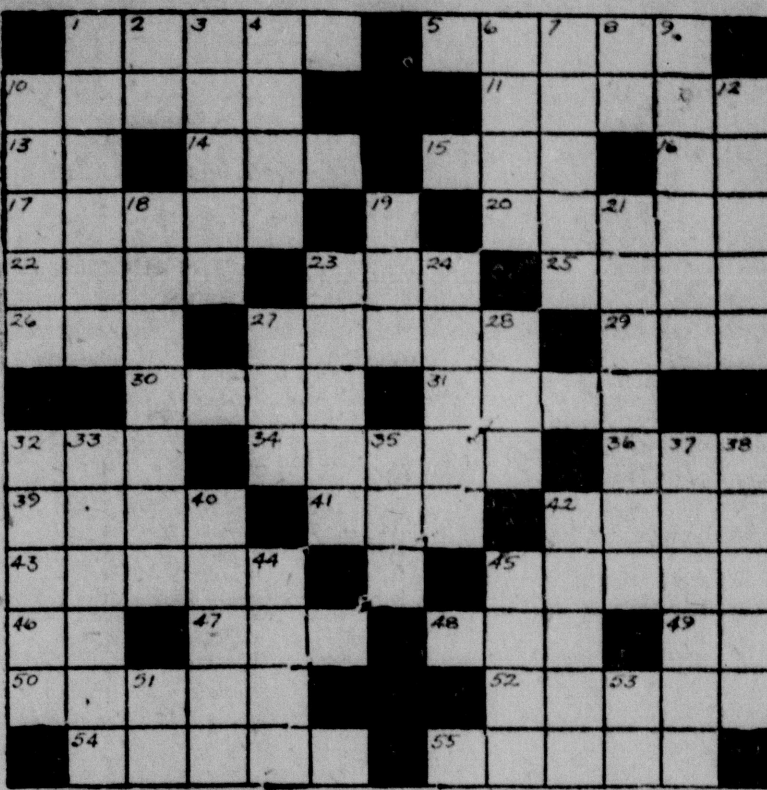

The salesmen, their wives and families enjoyed an ideal outing at the park. A picnic dinner and supper were features of the outing with plenty of ice cream and cake between the intervals. Mrs. Charles Hill of this city was the winner of an electric iron in a popularity contest staged among the ladies. Mrs. E. H. Newton was the recipient of an enameled bath room chair and Mrs. H. H. Heinze was awarded a beautiful electric lamp. Prizes of bathing caps were awarded to the following: Mrs. Charles Hill, Miss Ruth Leydig, Miss Titus, Mrs. Fine, Miss Marion Deveney, Mrs. Eugene Heinze, Mrs. A. E. Taylor, Mrs. Ed. Harris, Mrs. Clyde Wieher, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Henry Leydig and Mrs. J. H. Danavin. Favors were also presented to every man, woman and child attending the outing.

HOW TO LAY LINOLEUM

The right way to lay Linoleum is to cement it over a layer of builders deadening felt paper (1½ lbs. to the square yard) which should first be pasted to the floor with Linoleum Paste. This overcomes bulging and stretching, makes the seams watertight, and practically invisible and prolongs the life of the floor.

ALTOONA

November 15 1923.

Lind Brothers,
Altoona, Pa.
Gentlemen:

I am well pleased with the Duntile stucco home which you have just completed for me. The building of this home was a practical demonstration that confirmed the opinion I expressed when you showed me the first sample Duntile. I have had considerable experience in architectural work, and in Duntile I recognized a practical building unit.

When this house was being built I naturally watched the operation very closely not only because I was interested in seeing how the unit worked out on the job but because it was my own house. I liked the ease and rapidity with which Duntile went into the wall. Every unit was true to shape and the usual waste of time leveling up, so common with most units, was entirely eliminated.

My home is not only attractive in appearance but is permanent in every sense of the word. The cost was much less than if brick had been used, in fact, slightly less than it would have been of frame construction.

The horizontal dead air space and the double wall construction furnishes thermal bottle insulation and precludes all dampness. This allows plastering direct, not only a saving in cost but a plaster job on masonry will not crack and is much more permanent than when done on lath.

But what especially appeals to me about Duntile is its wall efficiency. The full mortar bed and the keyed mortar joints are unique and account for this. In most building units the wall efficiency is less than that of the unit itself, while with Duntile exactly the opposite is true. The efficiency of a Duntile wall is greater than that of the unit.

My experience with Duntile has been so satisfactory that I can recommend it most highly for the construction of beautiful and permanent homes.

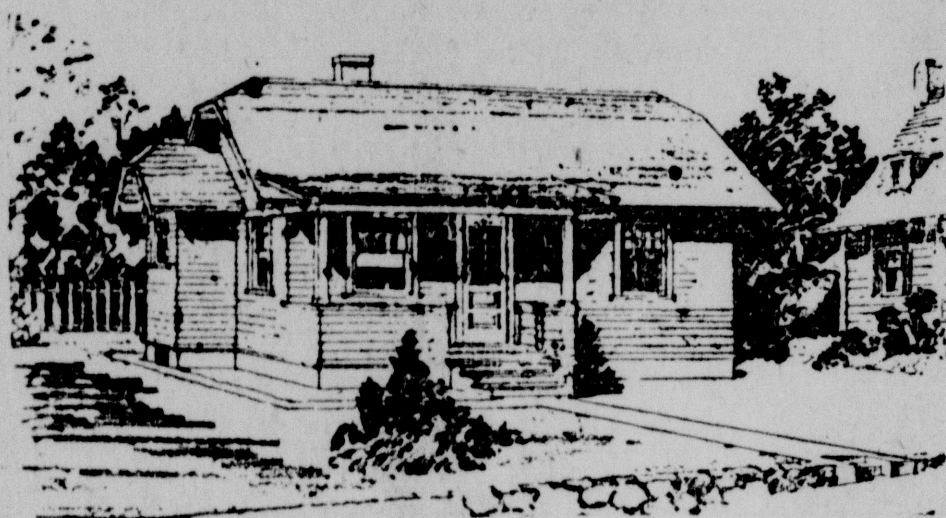

Very truly yours,
ELWOOD S. CLOUSE.

IF YOU ARE PLANNING TO BUILD—READ THESE ADS—AND SAVE MONEY

If a four-room bungalow appeals to you, one that is entirely different, Sherwood will appeal to you. Its plain roof and wall surface, with all unnecessary and expensive detail left off, is designed with economy in view. Stock materials are used throughout, resulting in a good return for money invested.

This small cottage with a well selected color-scheme will compare favorably with more expensive homes. One could paint the walls a light gray, with the trim and warm white, and with a green-stained roof it would look well.

The plans provide for living-room, bedroom, sleeping-alcove, and a roomy kitchen with a breakfast-nook. The bath is accessible from a small service-hall; the sleeping-quarters also open from the hall. One goes to the basement from the kitchen. A good-size closet is arranged for at the end of the hall. An entrance-porch just the right size is arranged at the front.

This with the projecting wall of the kitchen help to break the severity of the lines in a pleasing manner. The basement, which is under the rear portion, provides ample room for fuel and storage.

This illustration shows you the inner parts of Cole's Hot Blast Furnace. Notice the fierce flames around the mouth of the Red Tube. These are the flames of the fuel gases and represent extra heat for your home. The heavy cast fire-pot of the furnace is heavily ribbed and corrugated so as to stand great heat indefinitely. The radiator is extra deep and oversize to transmit very bit of heat instantly into the rooms. It is absolutely air-tight, preventing the slightest leakage of gas, dust or smoke. NEW YORK—This place is not all mad rush, as may have been suggested in several letters I have written recently. There are many who live by song and laughter and I believe you will find more wandering minstrels here than in other cities.

There is, for instance, Tony who turns his wagon into my street several mornings each week. As he leads his horse around the corner he begins to sing "Yes, We Have No Bananas" in great glee, for he has a wagon full of bananas. "Now, ladies, all stick your heads out the window. I'm going to sing." And sing he does, little Italian folk, songs and snatches of opera, cutting high capers in ecstatic dance. And then he sells his bananas, 15 for a quarter, and cares little whether he makes a sale, for at heart he is a song and dance man.

And every Friday morning there is the old organ grinder with his little music box. Its reels are broken and it wheezes and squeals as he turns the crank, but one can distinguish among the sour notes "In the Good Old Summer Time" and other popular hits of a decade ago.

At twilight occasionally there comes a young Irishman with the most powerful voice I ever heard. He tilts his head to one side and cups one ear with his hand as though his voice were too strong for his own ears. He sings "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "Bedelia" and "Sidelwalks of New York" and pennies and dimes are tossed from windows.

On holiday mornings such as Christmas and Thanksgiving and Easter there come an old man and his wife who sing carols and old favorites such as "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Their voices crack and they are frequently off key, yet they command attention such as no opera singer ever received, for they take grown men and women back to their mother's knees.

And so, despite the rumble and the roar and the fretting, we have our little moments of happiness.

"One Eye" Connolly and Tammany Young are keen rivals for the title of world's champion gate crasher. Tammany Young has been more successful in getting into theaters and the more polite gatherings, but "One Eye" has achieved a national reputation by seeing every prize fight in the past 26 years without paying admission.

The other day he tried to pay Bill Connors, the doorman of a Broadway theater where prize fight comedy is playing. Connors described the fight scene so realistically that "One-Eye" bought a ticket for a gallery seat. After the show started he was seen sitting in the orchestra.

Competition is keen even among the bootblacks. Heretofore the old fellows and the kids had had quite a battle in Bryant Park and Madison Square because the boys would shine shoes for a nickel while the old shiners asked a dime. A truce has been effected whereby the boys have exclusive rights to Bryant Park and the old men exclusive privileges in Madison Square.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton © 1925 NEA SERVICE INC.

THE STORY SO FAR:

GLORIA GORDON, beautiful flapper, marries DICK GREGORY, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes . . . but no work or children.

She refuses to work and hires a housemaid. But Dick has to let the maid go, for Gloria has swamped him with debts.

She becomes infatuated with STANLEY WAYBURN, an out-of-work actor, and follows him to New York. But he spurns her. Then she tries to get a job as a chorus girl and fails. Discouraged, she comes home to Dick. He takes her back, but not as his wife.

Gloria begins to suspect that he is in love with his secretary, SUSAN BRIGGS. And the breach between husband and wife widens daily. Gloria discovers that Miss Briggs is in love with Dick. She orders him to discharge his secretary, and when he refuses leaves him.

Dick sends her $50 weekly, but she returns it to him and gets a job as stenographer for ULYSSES X. FORGAN, a wealthy real-estate operator. But Forgan makes love to her, and she gives up her position.

Gloria's family, headed by AUNT DORCAS, decide to have a counsel to settle her tangled affairs for her. Not knowing this, Gloria goes with her father and mother to Aunt Dorcas' house for Sunday dinner.

Dick walks slowly into the hall. He picked up the telephone and gave the familiar number of the Gordon home. He could hear Central ringing it. . . .

Then, resolutely, he snatched the receiver back on its hook, and set the little instrument down on the table.

He stood there looking at it. With his hand raised to his lips, he pressed Gloria's handkerchief hard against them. . . . That bit of fabric seemed to hold some of the fragrance of her in its scented folds. Her hair had smelled of mimosa flowers. . . .

Dick put out his hand again for the telephone. But suddenly, snatched it back, as if the little black instrument had been flame.

There was subdued panic in the speed with which he snapped off the lights, and left the house. He flung himself into the little blue car, and backed it down the driveway. . . .

"If I'd stayed a minute longer, I'd have called her up. . . . told her to come!" he said, disgustedly to himself, as the car rolled along the road.

He took out his watch and looked at it. "Ten o'clock!" Too early to go to bed on a moonlit night like this.

He drove aimlessly around the dark streets where the trees made black shadows along the sides. . . . every street a Lover's Lane tonight.

He passed the house, with his eyes straight ahead of him. But halfway down the street, he turned in his seat and looked back at the gray, blurred outlines of it. There was a light in the window of Gloria's room. . . .

The blue car slowed down and almost stopped. Its brakes screamed in the stillness of the street.

Then, suddenly, it shot forward in silent flight. Its taillight winked like a small, evil eye as it turned the corner. . . .

NOT knowing whose car it was, Gloria heard it as she stood before her dresser, getting ready for bed.

She looked at herself in the mirror. . . . What was the good of all her beauty, she wondered, when Dick wasn't there to see it?

Her hair might just as well be drab instead of red gold in all its deep waves. And her mouth . . . why should it be shaped for kisses, when he had grown tired of kissing her? . . . Gloria turned away her head, so that she couldn't see her reflection.

"Were you just bluffing me when you said you were going back to work?"

She put up her hand, and turned out the light, with a vicious little movement. Then she lay down on the bed, and tried to sleep. It was past midnight, before she finally dropped off.

The next morning dawned to the sound of slow dropping rain on the leaves outside her window.

When she heard her mother moving around in the kitchen, she dressed and hurried downstairs to help her.

"We won't have much for breakfast . . . just some berries and toast and coffee, I thought," Mrs. Gordon said. "Your Aunt Dorcas always has such big dinners that we'll all be sick if we eat too much, now."

With a shudder, Gloria remembered that they were going to Aunt Dorcas' house for dinner!

At one o'clock they went. Aunt Dorcas, flushed and beaming, welcomed them with her best manner as Head of the House, Uncle Henry, small and silent, stood behind her.

And as Head of the House, Aunt Dorcas took her place behind the dinner table. Aunt Dorcas always served, just as she always drove the family car.

Cousin Lulu and her young husband, George, were there, too. The New Baby, they explained, was taking her nap upstairs on Aunt Dorcas' bed.

"What are you going to name her?" Gloria asked innocently. Lulu and Aunt Dorcas turned reproachful eyes upon her.

"We're going to name her Dorcas," said Lulu. "Why, she's the living image of Mother's hair and eyes, and all!"

Once more Aunt Dorcas beamed. Even The Baby had deferred to her as Head of the House. And all was well.

GLORIA was afraid of Aunt Dorcas. "I do hope she doesn't get started on me and Dick, again," she said prayerfully to herself, as she ate the hot cherry pie that followed the meal.

But she soon found out that what The Family had really come together for, was a counsel. Aunt Dorcas, with her finest military air, took the floor the minute they were all settled in the living room.

"Your mother tells me you've gone back to work, Gloria," she began severely. "What's the meaning of that?"

Gloria drew in her breath. "Why shouldn't I work, Aunt?" she asked, cause the boys would shine shoes for a nickel while the old shiners asked a dime. A truce has been effected whereby the boys have exclusive rights to Bryant Park and the old men exclusive privileges in Madison Square.

—JAMES W. DEAN.

"I'm used to working." "Doesn't this young Gregory intend to give you a red cent?" Aunt Dorcas went on with her investigation.

"He's sent me money . . . but I gave it back to him. I didn't want it," Gloria answered in a low tone. She could feel the blood rising to her cheeks.

Aunt Dorcas looked at her with disgust. "Well, you are easy!" she exclaimed. "To let a man treat you the way Dick Gregory has . . . And then to let him go scot-free without giving you any money at all! You are a ninny!"

"Gloria said nothing." "What are you going to do about it?" her aunt prodded her. "Don't you realize that it's no more than right that you should take his money. You're his wife!"

"Yes, and if Gloria divorces Dick she ought to get good, fat alimony!" Cousin Lulu broke in shrilly. "She's a fool not to do that! I can see . . . Gloria felt her mother's tender, wounded eyes pass over her. She heard her voice, soft and low after Aunt Dorcas' strident tones.

"No, there won't be any divorce," that soft voice said. "Such a thing as divorce has never been in this family. . . . There isn't anything for Gloria to do that I can see. . . ."

"There are several things she can do!" declared Aunt Dorcas. She was like a lawyer giving an opinion. "She can sue young Gregory for alimony. Or she can go back to him, if she wants to."

SHE stopped suddenly. Gloria had risen, and she stood facing them with fiery cheeks and eyes that were too bright.

"I told you before that that's the one thing I can't do!" she cried out. "I've been on my knees to Dick to take me back, if you must know! And he won't have me back! He's sick and tired of me! Don't I know . . ."

Aunt Gregory nodded her large blond head. "Then there's more to this affair of yours than anybody knows," she remarked sagely. "People don't separate unless one of 'em is in love with somebody else. . . ."

She studied Gloria with her prominent blue eyes, as if she could read her thoughts if only she looked at her long enough.

The girl knew she couldn't bear to be in the room a moment longer. It was none of her aunt's business whether she took money from Dick or earned it typewriting!

And it certainly was nobody's affair whether she lived with Dick, but his and hers. . . .

She looked from her aunt to her cousin Lulu with hostile eyes. "They don't want to help me, anyway," she told herself the brutal truth. "They just want to find out all my business."

Correct Clothes To Meet The Obligation Of Every Occasion

Be Posted, Not "Roasted"

The smart accessories of Tuxedo dress for men are an oft-told tale that would seem to need no re-telling. Yet, much confusion still exists in the minds of those who assume semi-formal evening clothes occasionally, instead of habitually. For example, it is astonishing to find many men cherishing the misbelief that one's Tuxedo suit may also be worn during the day or that the Tuxedo is the proper turnout for a morning or afternoon wedding. Others cling to the impression that the Tuxedo is only a sort of up-stage or glorified evening sack suit and that, therefore, almost any type of shirt, collar, tie and shoe may properly accompany it. In truth, the Tuxedo is not informal evening wear at all. It is semi-formal evening wear. It should be self-evident that any mode of dress which employs the two most ceremonious of all colors, black and white, cannot, in the very nature of things, be informal. It must be semi-formal or formal.

Hence, these two facts should be kept clearly in mind—the Tuxedo may only be worn after 6 P. M., and the Tuxedo must express in its details the semi-formality of its character. This eliminates the turn-down collar, the white silk shirt, the colored ribbon upon a straw hat and all other appurtenances which go with lounge clothes in the daytime. It is just as easy to be posted as "roasted". Moreover, the consciousness of being correctly turned out makes a man enjoy wearing evening clothes to which no pleasure in dress is comparable and makes him wear them eagerly, frequently and self-assuredly.

Illustrated here are the smart and approved details of semi-formal evening dress, including the wing collar, the black bow-knot tie and the white pleated-bosom shirt with single cuffs. The pleats upon one's shirt-front may be either broad or narrow, as personal taste and becomingness dictate. The wing collar should be chosen in a shape that befits your neck and face. The bow-knot tie may be wide, middling or narrow and may have square, pointed or rounded tips, according to which style looks best.

Correct semi-formal evening dress is the same Summer or Winter. Contrary to popular opinion, it is just as comfortable as any other turnout a man can assume. To go upon the dance floor in a double-breasted blue coat and white flannel trousers makes you no cooler and lays you open to the charge of ignorance, indifference or impudence. Be correct. Subscribe to good form. Dress as the best-dressed men dress. You will take more pleasure out of "life's greater moments."

LETTER FROM MRS. MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

My Dear Son: I have been much annoyed and chagrined by seeing so much about your affairs in the papers of late. It seems to me that I do not pick up a paper without seeing Leslie's name. Until now it has always been considered a disgrace to see the names of any of the ladies of the Prescott family bandied about in a newspaper.

You know I am an old-fashioned woman, John, and I do not care for notoriety of any kind.

In my telegram to you last week, I intimated that it would be a good thing if Leslie sold those pearls and I am advising you that, if by any possibility she ever gets them back, you sell them. Five hundred thousand dollars, my son, is more money than any of us ever had as far back as our history goes and to think that your wife has that much money tied up in baubles to wear around her neck is a sin.

So that Ellington girl is dead. It was a good thing. There was always bad blood in that family. Mrs. Burke couldn't live with the brother and why she should take the sister into her house and pass her off on you is more than I can solve. She probably found she could not keep herself.

There was a very romantic story in the papers to the effect that Miss Ellington died because she would not tell where Leslie's pearls were. I hardly think this can be true, since you have not found them. If that were true she would have managed to tell you where they are. My opinion is that the man who got away has the jewels and I thought so even before the police gave it as their verdict.

I don't think I shall come to you just now. I find it very pleasant here. My rooms are comfortable, I have become used to Miss Anderson and she does not worry me. Mr. Orson Gibson whom you met in Albany takes me to church and concerts and other entertainments which I consider respectable and appropriate for a lady of my years and position.

I need some new clothes. Perhaps you had better send Miss Anderson a check and let us go into New York to do some shopping. Mr. Gibson is going down next week. I think perhaps $500 will do.

Now, son, all that I can say is, that as soon as you have gotten out of this mess, tell Leslie not to get you into another.

As soon as things settle down again I will come over and see the new house. But you know young children always worry me a good deal.

Sincerely your mother,

MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT.

TOMORROW—Letter from Ruth Burke to Leslie Prescott.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Following the war it was believed that much of America's foot ailments would be forgotten.

Style, however, resumed its place in the way of what folk should wear. So the same old style of uncomfortable shoes assumed their regular place in the march of tired feet.

There are sensible shoes on the market, however. Foot-sore persons should look for them.

There is no reason to be ashamed to ask the shoe clerk to show everything in the store, if it is necessary to get a fit.

Shoe salesmen get fussy sometimes, and the purchaser takes a shoe that does not suit. Then that person is fussy as long as he wears that shoe.

Saturday afternoons and Saturday nights are bad times to go into a shoe store. The salesmen are too busy to give good service.

Try going into the store during the weekdays, and sit right there until you are satisfied that a shoe is found which is not only comfortable, but good looking.

Decorations and titles for distinguished service are now forbidden in Germany.

The Prime Function of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana)

A bulletin of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States says: "The function of business is to provide for the material needs of mankind and to increase the wealth of the world and the value and happiness of life." These words might have been written to describe the ideals animating the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Among the more important "material needs" of society are the products of petroleum. When progress ushered in the industrial era, animal and vegetable oils were the only lubricants available and the quantity of these was insufficient to permit unlimited expansion.

Petroleum was discovered just when it was needed to supply the enormous quantities of lubricants required by this mechanical age.

The importance of gasoline as a servant of society came with the invention of the internal combustion engine and its application to the automobile. This product is now indispensable.

It is because the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been able to produce gasoline in ever-increasing quantities that it has been able to render its greatest service in "increasing the wealth of the world and the value and happiness of life."

Where twenty years ago only a handful of automobiles were in operation, today there are 17½ millions in service.

The constant demand for gasoline has outstripped the increase in the production of crude oil.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has led the way in bridging this gap. It has accomplished this through such inventions as the Burton Cracking Process; through vision in anticipating future needs, and through ability to create an organization capable of functioning economically and efficiently under the stress of rapidly changing conditions.

The prime function of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is to provide society with a dependable service of oil products to meet its material needs and to increase the sum total of wealth available to the common good.

This Company takes profound pride in rendering this service and it believes that, in so serving, it deserves and earns the reasonable profits which are paid over to its stockholders in return for the use of the capital they have invested in the business.
